Custor's Campilgo.

General Custar has submitted to General Sher-idsu a report of his recent operations against the Indians. Though extremely interesting, it is too long for transferment to our columns. The compaign commenced on the second day of compinent of over two hundred lodges, comprisdlers, characterized by Custar as the "most mischievous, blood thirsty and barbarous hund of Indians that infest the plains." It was at once coolved to punish these savages as they deserved, but the intention was changed by the disovery that the two white women captured in Kanass last autumu, Mrs. Morgan and Miss White, were held prisoners in the Cheyenne village. It was, therefore, out of the question to usume a hostile attitude until posecesion was attack would have been the signal for their mur der. The village of one of the chiefs was enter-ed, and four "blg lajuns," including two chiefs of the Dog Soldiers-Big Head and Duli Kuife-were seized and put under guard. The palaver then comsenced for the release of the women Little was effected during two days' talk, but on the third day Custar laid down his ultimatum him by sunset, his hostages should hang. This brought the Indians to terms, and in the middle of the alternoon Mrs. Morgan and Mass White the drubbing the Inditus received at Washite as had quen enstonary before.

he conversed expressed themselves as heartly sick of war, and declared their intentions of making their way to the point designated by the government, and submitting to the decision of the authornies. The two captives released were considers their liberation as a full compensation for the hardships endured by his command. He still holds the Cheyenne chiefs as hostages for liet, let us hope, is well louaded.
